THE GAZETTE.

TUESDAY MARCH 15

George W. Cable, the novelist, has organized a bible class at Northampton, Massachusetts, numbering 200 men and women.

George Jones, the proprietor of the New York Times, declares: "The Times opposed Blaine in 1884, and will oppose him again if he is nominated next year. Who the republicans will nominate I can not tell. Blaine may get the nomination, but he never will be elected. If I were allowed to place a man in nomination for the presidency, I would name Judge Walter Q. Gresham, of Indiana. Cleveland will be nominated by the democrats for re-election. He is the best man in the party."

According to a writer in the Milwaukee Sentinel, Col. W. L. Utley, who recently died at Racine, Wis., was the "owner of the last slave on American soil." When he was in Tennessee with his regiment, a colored boy escaped from his master and sought refuge in the colonel's tent. The owner came into camp next day and demanded the surrender of his property, but Colonel Utley refused to give up the boy. Afterward the slave owner secured a judgment against Colonel Utley for the value of the property, which he paid, and was indemnified by congress for his loss.

Senator Voorhees did not attend the democratic banquet at Boston, the other day, but sent his regrets. What he said to a Washington friend on the subject of politics was this: "I think politics are exceedingly trifling just now. I shall go west for a few months. All that I could do here would be to secure the appointment of a few postal clerks. As to discussing any question, one is as likely to antagonize members of his own party as those of the opposition. There is really no great issue at stake between the two great parties."

Joe Roy, postmaster at Merrillan, and a lawyer with a good practice, passed through Madison early this morning on his way to Washington where he becomes chief clerk in the office of the postmaster general at the annual salary of $2,500. Mr. Roy was clerk of the assembly committee on judiciary in 1883, when Robert J. Mc Bride, of Nashville, was its chairman. It should be difficult to conceive why he should abandon both a lucrative law practice and the salary attaching to the office of postmaster for a taste of the fascination of Washington life at a meager compensation. The foregoing is from the Madison Journal and shows how weak human nature is when it comes to struggle with the desire to accept a public position, though a very humble one, at the seat of government. Men have been known to abandon a good business and the comforts of home to accept humble positions at Washington.

The condition of business in the legislature may be pretty well judged by the following statement: The chief clerks of both houses Monday evening submitted statements showing the condition of business before both houses. The statement of the chief clerk of the senate shows that the number of bills introduced in the senate to date (March 14, 1887) was 373; number of bills sent to the governor, 33; number of bills in the hands of committees, 181; number of bills in the hands of special committees, 62; number of bills in assembly, 69; number of bills indefinitely postponed, 58; number of bills on the calendar, 9; number of bills in committees on engrossment and enrolling, 6. Total 373. Total number of bills received from assembly to date, 174.

The statement of the chief clerk of the assembly shows the condition of business in the assembly as follows: Bills passed, 202; indefinitely postponed, 120; in the hands of standing committees, including engrossed bills and committee bills on third reading, 419; in the hands of committee of one, not reported, 69; on calendar and laid over, 45; total 885. Assembly bills returned from the senate concurred in, 17; senate bills received by assembly, 81; concurred in, 20; concurred in 68.

SENATOR SPOONER'S OPINIONS.
When Senator John C. Spooner left Washington for his home at Hudson, he stopped in New York and Chicago, and of course was interviewed by the papers in both cities. The substance of what he said in both cities is found in the following:

The senator said congress had done some things and left many things undone. Owing to the failure of the deficiency bill, great inconvenience, and, in some cases, absolute want had resulted. Congressmen, employees and many others were depending upon the amounts due them from that bill, to the extent of retaining the houses in which they lived. He hoped for good results from the inter-state commerce bill, and said the opinion obtained that it would have a restraining effect upon a "developing extreme" on the part of the railroads. People generally were denouncing a pool. The question, however, of regulating 135,000 miles or more of railroads, of revolutionizing the system, of strengthening the system, of establishing of rules in the vast transportation of freight, was to the senator mind an enormous one, and hence the importance of an able commission. Cleveland, he thought had not strengthened himself in his administration so far. The great delay in so many important matters was due to three or four ring leaders in the house. Randall naturally desired to retard legislation in the hope of an extra session. He knew there would be fewer democratic freetraders in the house. If Cleveland desires the nomination in '88, he thought he could have it, but the senator inclined to the firm belief that the country had not made up its mind to re-nominate an administration that had treated the public good, and with men like Sherman (at Allouan at the head, that party will resume its power in 1888. It is hard to predict for men, however, for he said it was only a few weeks ago that the party was looking to General Logan to lead it into power.

It will be seen from this that Senator Spencer thinks that some one else besides Blaine would better serve the party in the campaign of '88. On this point there are many minds. But the way the straws seem to point, Blaine will get the nomination.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Important Business Considered in Both Houses.

SENATORS' NAVY AND SPOONER AT THE STATE CAPITOL.
Special to the Gazette.

MADISON, March 15.—In the assembly this morning the bill was considered to appropriate $4,000 to the Wisconsin Dairymen's association for the years 1887 and 1888.

Bills were passed appropriating $3,000 for the public school exhibit at Chicago next July, at the national educational convention.

Establishing by county tax of one-fifth of a mill in counties a fund for indigent soldiers and dependents.

Fixing the fees of justices on inquests at $4 per day and witness fees as in cases of law.

To incorporate the city of Tomah, and authorizing the mayor of Milwaukee to grant license to pawn brokers, jacket dealers, etc.

The senate passed the following bill providing for the appointment of register in probate in Wisconsin county.

Authorizing the licensing of U. S. accident association to do business in this state on payment of usual taxes.

Providing that persons convicted of being habitual drunkards may be confined in an infirmary for a term not to exceed two years, provided some friend or relative of such inebriate give approved bond for the expenses of such inebriate during confinement; empowering mothers to appoint guardians for children where the father died without so doing. The bill was killed to abolish the bureau of labor statistics.

Senators Sawyer and Spooner visited both houses this morning, and each house took twenty minutes' recess to pay them their respects.

THE HOUSE'S LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.
HOWELL, MICH., March 15.—Sheriff Cook has offered a reward of $500 on behalf of the county and the city and insurance companies will each offer rewards for the arrest of the man who set the fire in this city Saturday night. The total loss will be over $100,000, with nearly $50,000 insurance. Excitement here is at fever heat.

Failure of a Lumber Dealer.
GREENSBORO, March 15.—Monday afternoon George S. Crawford, the well-known lumber dealer, filed a deed of assignment to Howard Douglas. The assets will not be over $100,000, while the liabilities are fully $125,000.

An Ice-Castle Casualty.
MONTREAL, March 15.—Mons. Forget has died of injuries received by the bursting of a tombard at the storming of the ice-castle during the carnival.

OPHTHALMIA.
From the Congressionalist.

The following item is going the rounds of the newspapers: "A man who had a scrofulous infection, which he set about to cure with whiskey. He got well of his trouble, but became a hard drinker, and soon found himself the victim of a rare disease called ophthalmia. This rare disease affected his eyes, and he was unable to walk forward. When the patient was told to advance, he used every effort to do so, but could only succeed in going backward, and he continued to do so until he died."

The ophthalmia is indeed a "rare disease," but it is a trifle strange that the learned Dr. Mazzotti should speak of it as a "rare disease."

Very distinct and striking examples of it may be found in every community where the poison of alcohol is indulged. It is difficult to find a confirmed moderate who is not a victim to ophthalmia.

It is very sad, but the habit of drinking is sure to breed this disease, and the victim is never able to go ahead in anything. His movement is all backward.

He loses his character and old acquaintances getting on comfortably, feeding and clothing and educating their children well, laying up some of their earnings against a rainy day, and gaining the respect and esteem of their neighbors and townsmen; but the poor fellow who is taken with the ophthalmia can never keep up with them. He is ever going the other way, is running in debt, starving his children, ruining his health, blasting his character, and finally stumbling into perdition.

If you do not wish to get the ophthalmia, quit your beer.

Fast and Filthy in Georgia.
During the past few weeks churches have been granted in Georgia for twelve railroad companies, four large street railway corporations, two municipal railroads, four electric, eleven large manufacturing and six light companies, while thirty minor manufacturing companies have applied for charters.—Boston Transcript.

Titan and Nova.
Twenty-five years ago there were but two places along the Jersey coast of any importance—Long Branch and Cape May. Then the tidal valuation of the seaboard was less than $7,000,000, while the last report of Comptroller Anderson gives the astounding valuation of over $100,000,000.—Chicago Times.

Winkie Collins' Manuscript.
Winkie Collins has sent to the Buffalo Library the manuscript of his "Two Destinies," handsomely bound at his own expense. Mr. Collins' writing is clear and very distinct. His manuscripts have many erasures and interpolations, but are with unusual legibility.—New York Graphic.

Enjoy Life.
What a truly beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up, disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Frederick's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent of such maladies as biliousness, indigestion, Stomachic Distress, Constipation, Prostration, Diarrhoea of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

THE RUSSIAN Nihilist.

HE UNDERTAKES TO CELEBRATE THE ACCESSION OF ALEXANDER

By Making a Muscovite Angel of Him by the Dynamite Process—Instead of Which It Looks as Though He Will Advance in the Czar's Dominion—A Widespread Conspiracy.

LONDON, March 15.—In the house of commons Monday afternoon Sir James Fergusson, under foreign secretary, in answer to a question regarding the reports, attempt to assassinate the czar, said the government had been informed that some persons had been arrested at St. Petersburg having explosives in their possession. The prisoners were arrested while in their rooms, which fronted on the route taken by the czar and imperial family for the memorial services which were held Sunday.

The sixth anniversary of the death of his imperial father.

It transpires that the conspiracy against the life of the czar is of a more portentous nature than even the first believers in the plot supposed. The plot had among its originators and supporters a vast number of persons scattered throughout Russia, embracing men and women of every grade, from noble to peasant. The situation is regarded as very serious and a large number of arrests have been made. This information comes from a source that is regarded as absolutely trustworthy.

The London Times and the Berlin Tagblatt have both reported, the latter stating that an attempt was made to assassinate the czar and empress by the explosion of dynamite bombs. The attempt was not successful, however, and the dispatch to the Gazette says the leader of the assassins was arrested, and is now imprisoned in the Fortress Peter and Paul.

The Daily Telegraph says a party of nihilists who had been condemned to exile, had attacked a mail coach near Tschita, shot the coachman and four passengers, and stole 17,000 roubles, 40,000 of which were in gold.

St. Petersburg, March 15.—Six students, each having explosives in his possession, were arrested in Moscow Tuesday. They had evidently been assigned to stations along the street and were awaiting the passage of the czar.

VIENNA, March 15.—It is stated that a plot has been discovered in Russia involving land owners and traders, whose object is to overthrow the government. The conspiracy is in no way connected with the plots of the nihilists.

LEWIS AND CARKEE WRESTLE.

The Strangler Wins the Fourth Bout of the Series.

CHICAGO, March 15.—The fourth wrestling contest in the series between Jack Carkeek, the "Strangler" and Lewis, took place Monday night at the Casino. The first bout was a draw, the second was won by Carkeek, the third by Lewis, and the fourth by Carkeek.

VIENNA, March 15.—It is stated that a plot has been discovered in Russia involving land owners and traders, whose object is to overthrow the government. The conspiracy is in no way connected with the plots of the nihilists.

THE PRESIDENT IN A DILEMMA.

Put There by an Inquisitive Man with a Lottery Ticket.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The president Monday received an ill-spiced ticket from a man in Mississippi who incited a riot in the city and requested the president to sign it and send it back to him. He also asked the president to look the ticket over carefully and do nothing else. This might be necessary in order to make the ticket good. This communication puzzled the president and his secretaries, but after a consultation with the cabinet, they decided what is doubtless the explanation of the curious application for the president's autograph on the lottery ticket.

Across one end of the ticket was printed the warning "This ticket will not be received if it is mutilated in any way or the number on it changed, or unless it bears the signature of the president." The ticket bore the signature of the lottery company, but the purchaser of it thought the notice meant that the ticket had not been received by the president.

The president does not know what to do with the ticket; he can't send it back to the owner by mail without violating the law; it is against the law of the district for him to have the ticket in his possession, and it is not his to burn up.

Mexican Pensioners in a Bad Fix.
WASHINGTON, March 15.—The Mexican war survivors and widows of soldiers in that war will be chagrined to learn that no definite period can now be fixed when their cases will receive attention by the pension office. It is estimated that these pensioners are about 40,000, and it is said at the pension office that it will be simply impossible to take up the cases until additional forces are given the office. Under the law the appropriation for the payment of Mexican pensioners, $1,900,000 in all, is only available until June 30, 1888. After that time any portion remaining unexpended must be covered back into the treasury. The strong possibility is, therefore, that the most of the pensioners will have to wait until the next session of congress to get their money.

The Decker Memorial Fund.
BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 15.—The proposition to erect a monument to the memory of the late Henry Ward Decker by popular subscription is received with general favor in this city. Already several thousand dollars have been received and the committee will take definite shape in a few days. A meeting of citizens is called for Friday night to appoint a committee to have charge of the arrangements and subscriptions. Mrs. Decker goes to Potsdam to bid goodbye to "Bamball," where she spent her happy days with her husband. When she returns she will start at once for Florida.

Drew One Salary Too Many.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 15.—The attorney General Michener has entered suit in Boone county against President Harrison, of the Benevolent boards, to recover $2,800, Harrison having drawn a salary as trustee and also as president of the board. A suit is also to be filed to oust Harrison from the office of trustee of the Indiana hospital, on the ground of negligence.

Heavy Liabilities in Leather.
NEW YORK, March 15.—The old firm of R. A. Smith & Bros., leather merchants at 130 William street, preferred Monday to liquidate with preferences amounting to $100,000. The firm was established in 1825 by Adam Smith. The firm owns a tannery in Philadelphia, and has liabilities of $200,000. Their assets are from $200,000 to $250,000. The failure is due to changes in style, expensive experiments and bookkeeping.

An Intentional Contest.
GALVESTON, TEX., March 15.—In the congressional election Monday, Lewis Carroll and John Carlson, of Henderson, swore that August Carlson offered to pay them $2 each if they would vote for Worthington, and said that $2 had been sent him from Peoria to spend in this way. Other testimony of the same kind was given.

Sale of the Lynchburg Virginian.
LYNCHBURG, Va., March 15.—The Virginia Virginian, owned by Lewis Carroll, was sold to a syndicate composed of the leading business men of this city. Mr. Alex. McDonald, president editor of The News, will assume editorial control of The Virginian.

A Gift from Bremen Merchants.
NEW YORK, March 15.—The merchants of Bremen have sent $1,000 to the widows of the five seamen of the Virginia beach life-saving station, who recently lost their lives in efforts to rescue the crew of the wrecked German ship Hilfszucht.

A Gift for All.
In order to give all a chance to test it and thus be convinced of its wonderful curative powers, Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, will be, for a limited time, given away. This offer is not only liberal, but shows unbounded faith in the merits of this great remedy. All who suffer from Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis or any affection of Throat, Chest, or Lungs, are especially requested to call at Frank Sherer & Co's drug store, and get a trial bottle free; large bottles $1.

NATIONAL OPERATIC TRIUMPH.

New York, March 15.—Rubenstein's opera "Nero" was given for the first time in the English language Monday night at the Metropolitan Opera house, and proved to be the most spectacular and musical production ever known in the United States. The opera is a masterpiece of the operatic art, and the performance was a triumph.

Scenes Witnessed by the Rescuers—A Game of Cards That Will Never be Finished—Graphic Description of an Awful Disaster—Dead-Roll So Far as Known.

Boston, Mass., March 15.—The recent terrible disaster at the White River bridge, on the Central Vermont railway, was paralleled Monday and, with the exception of the fire feature, almost exactly duplicated at Bussey bridge, on the Delham branch of the Boston and Providence railway. At White River four cars were thrown from the track upon a bridge seventy feet above a river, and went down with the bridge to the ice below, resulting in the death of thirty-two people and the injury of nearly forty more. At Bussey bridge six cars were thrown from the track upon a bridge forty feet above the highway, and with the bridge crashed down into the street, resulting in the death of—according to latest reports—thirty-two people and the wounding of from forty to sixty more.
At White River the engine and two cars passed safely over the bridge and their occupants escaped as by a miracle. At Bussey bridge the engine and three cars passed safely over and their human freight escaped with only a jar.

The scene of Monday's awful calamity is seven miles southwest from Beacon hill.
Between the Forest Hills and Rosendale stations, on the Delham branch, South street makes a graceful curve and passes under the railroad, which also curves at that point.
The bridge crossed over the highway diagonally, at a height of forty feet and was 175 feet long. The point is upon the border of the old Bussey farm, now the property of Harvard college, and the seat of the Arnold arbitration. At 7 o'clock Monday morning the workingmen's train, consisting of an engine, eight passenger coaches and a smoking car, left Dedham for Boston. Engineer White was the engineer, Conductor Webster N. Drake, of Dedham, was in charge of the train, and was assisted by Conductors Myron W. Tilden, of Dedham, and Mr. Stables.
Immediately behind the locomotive was a passenger car, following next seven other ordinary day cars, most of them of the old-fashioned type—two, at least, with cast iron stoves in the middle of the car—and the rear was brought up by the smoking car; nine cars in all. About 500 people were on board, mostly workmen and women, shop and store girls, with lunch-bags in hand, chatting and laughing merrily, and a few business men. The three forward cars were more densely crowded than any of the others.

At just 7:15 o'clock the train rounded the curve and passed upon the bridge. The engine had just crossed, the last abutment when Engineer White felt a jar as if the train had struck something. Hastily glancing backward out of his cab-window he saw and heard, as did the engineer of that fated Central Vermont train, the rear cars and the bridge falling with a crash in the abyss below. The three cars immediately following the engine had crossed the bridge, but had been thrown from the track. Engineer White at once uncoupled his engine, and putting on all the steam possible, rushed to Forest Hills station. J. H. Tanton, a fish dealer, was driving up from Forest Hills toward the scene of the disaster when the engine came down the track whistling wildly.
The locomotive slowed down at the Forest Hills crossing and Tanton stopped, shouting to the engineer, "What's the matter?"

"My train has gone through Tin bridge," Telegraphed to Boston, was the reply.
Landon, went to the station with the message which was quickly flashed over the wires. Then he hastened back to his team and drove up to the wreck, being the first outsider to reach the spot. Arriving at Forest Hills, the engineer at once rang in a telegraph, which summoned to the scene the fire department of Rosendale with a steamer and a hook and ladder truck from Jamaica Plain. Having thoroughly aroused the surrounding communities and telegraphed the fact of the disaster to the city, Engineer White rounded his engine and ran her back to the wreck, where crowds were already gathering.

The first three cars stood derailed as he had left them. The next car was completely crushed—want to place a most extraordinary and inextinguishable fire. The next went over, the body of it went down the abyss, forty feet deep, and was hurled with such force against the masonry of the abutment that it was smashed into fragments. It was in this car, which bore the heaviest of the load, that the greatest number of casualties took place. The next car also dashed against the abutment, passing partially underneath and partially through the car in its advance of it. The shock sent it very heavily smashed, but enough of it was there to reveal the old-fashioned cast-iron stove standing bolt upright, untouched and intact. Still another followed this, and directly behind this car came another old-fashioned stove, which escaped with less damage than any other car that went through the bridge, a broken central part of the structure serving the purpose of propping it in an upright position. Then came another car, which the crash left upon its side, thoroughly smashed, and at the end of the smoking car, which, by a most extraordinary wrench, was turned exactly bottom side up and left lying upon its roof.

In the roadway under the bridge, then, in a space of 150 feet between abutment and abutment, there were an instant piled up the debris of six cars, interwoven almost inextricably with the crumpled and girder of the iron bridge, and within and among which the passengers were held fast, or wrecking in distress, some of them crushed almost beyond the recognition of the buried and the recognition of the buried. To such as had the power to move, the means of extrication were made the easier by the complexities of the wreck, for the sides and ends of the cars were nearly all smashed out, leaving more or less free access.

But in the two cars which struck the abutment the scene was fearful. The wooden debris was piled up about one of the stoves, and was on the very point of setting the wreck on fire when the earliest arrivals at the scene and those who had been in the cooling in extricating themselves unburied, managed to drag the stove out through the broken walls of the car and deposit it upon the roadway. None of the other stoves were smashed, for by reason of the instant piled up the wreck with their burning contents, and the work of extricating the dead and wounded began. Fortunately the wreck occurred in a thickly settled suburban neighborhood, and soon there was ample help on hand—police, surgeons and citizens whose willing hands and intelligent efforts soon cleared the wreck of its mangled and dead humanity. Another fortunate feature was the fact that the homes of the dead and wounded were near and they were rapidly transported thence.

When J. H. Tanton, the fish-dealer, who was first on the ground, arrived, crisis and grants were coming from all parts of the awful heap. Bruised and wounded people were crawling out from all sides. He found an ax and climbed upon the third car, where lay in the crush of others being brought in. The cries of the injured came mostly from this car, he thought, and with the assistance of two other men he soon removed from the debris two men, three of them dead.

By this time the firemen had arrived, and they, with the injured from the wreck, were hard at work. In one of the forward cars and among the last passengers to be taken out was a young woman, whose death was killed outright and terribly mutilated as well—was the most shocking of any of the passengers. This unfortunate woman was pinned down in the car with the face jammed between the sills and in a state shocking condition. Thus she was alive until the body was moved, when, to the terror of her rescuers, and it was found that the head and one arm were severed from the body by a knife. The rescuers obtained saws and jackscrews and, after much difficult work succeeded in extricating all that remained of the woman, who lay a moment before was full of life. The body was first removed, then the head, and finally the recognizable limbs, and finally the arm.
Then near the stove, in each other's arms, were two young women, both dead—evidently instantly killed—their heads crushed almost beyond recognition. Here again it required the most heroic efforts to save the victims. Another woman lay exposed between two cars, with life extinguished. Not a mark appeared upon her body to indicate how death approached. Extended with arms and feet outstretched, she lay deceiving to ward off the crushing fingers which fell about, but did not touch her, she lay there as calm as though in sleep. Just the awful position in which the body lay left no doubt but that in the upheaval of the overturning car the woman became wedged between the seats and her young life slowly crept from the frail body. It was an awful sight.

The majority of the passengers in the cars which fell down to the street were women, all young, happy, hopeful creatures, whose tiny stomachs with carefully prepared lunches told pathetically, as no words possibly can, the circumstances of their daily lives.

In the smothered car, about 50, was playing cards with Ed Shaw, Harry Guy and Officer Lailler. Every one of his companions was killed outright and a few moments later Mr. Roudy found himself standing on the soft, clayey mud of the highway, his clothing torn, his blood streaming from face and head, holding in his hand the queen of diamonds, the surviving relics besides himself of a game that will never be finished. Kelly Abraham was really in great many pieces about his body, and all her front teeth knocked out and several of them were swallowed.
One man was found sitting bolt upright in his seat, but stark dead, with blood flowing in several small streams from cuts on the head.

The woman had an awful time in getting out. Many left their clothing, which was torn from their forms. All of those pinned down in the cars had a horrible fear of fire, and showed for assistance to escape possible cremation.

William Young, of Rosendale, was in the third car that fell. He says there were a great many ladies in his car, most of them being killed. He saw many women who were killed and were cut and severely lacer-ated. He says the women were as brave as the men, and there was little to crying, except by those who were pinned down. An officer of the police saw the head of a woman pulled out, and breaking the neck of a car with hands, saws, and anything they could lay their hands on, in the absence of axes or other implements, the workers daily succeeded in pulling out the body. In another instance the body of a woman was pulled out of the wreck minutes after the disaster. A wreck resulted in the finding of the missing limb. He also saw the body of a man pulled out, minus both legs, and further search resulted in the discovery of the legs. It seemed as if these members had been pulled from the body. Many scenes similar to those described above might be pictured.
The wreck was horrible in the extreme, and one of the very worst in the annals of railroading.

While the people were working to rescue those in the wreck it was necessary in two cases to cut bodies of the dead in order to get them out. A singular incident was observed in the case of one man who after getting out of the wreck walked, quite a distance toward Rosendale and then suddenly fell dead. He did not seem to be externally injured and it is supposed that death was due to internal injuries aggravated by exhaustion.

As fast as the victims were brought out they were lifted tenderly into teams and carried to the Rosendale and Forest Hills stations. Most of the dead to the latter place.
Those who lived in Rosendale and who were able to walk, a score or more, climbed painfully up the embankment, through mud and ice to the track, and took up their march for home, and this corps of bleeding and maimed men tramping wearily into the town was about the first positive information the community of that place had of the extent of the disaster.

As soon as the news of the disaster reached Boston, the railroad at once began running extra trains to the wreck, and approximately 75,000 people visited the scene, and carloads of splinters were carried away as souvenirs.

The following is a correct list of the
